

Delivering on the promise of open access: Enabling author rights

What are author rights and why do they matter?

- Copyright law grants exclusive rights to creators of original works of authorship.
- Typically, national laws automatically extend protections once creative works become fixed in a tangible medium (e.g., write something on paper, take a photo, or save a digital document).
- Copyright grants to creators a bundle of exclusive rights over their creative works, which generally include, at a minimum, rights to reproduce, distribute, display, and make adaptations.
- Copyright law prohibits copying or altering work without permission from the rights holder.
- Under the subscription system, journal publishers routinely require authors to transfer all copyrights as a condition for publication:

“The authors hereby transfer all copyrights in and to the manuscript named above in all forms and media, now or hereafter known, to the PUBLISHER effective if and when the paper is accepted for publication.”

- Journal articles are then locked behind a subscription only paywall that enables publishers to maintain control over access and re-use of the published work.
- In contrast, many authors have embraced OA publishing to accomplish two specific goals:
 1. Make our work freely available to the world.
 2. Maintain control over our copyrights.

The OA movement has promoted Creative Commons (CC) licenses so authors can retain copyrights and decide how their work is used

CC Denotes that the license is Creative Commons.

BY Means "by". End users must attribute and say who made the work.

NC Non-commercial. The work cannot be used for profit.

SA Share-alike. All derivatives/reuse must apply same CC license.

ND No derivatives. No changes or alterations can be made to the work.

- CC licenses restrict what end-users may do under the license but not what licensor (rights holder) can do.
- Licensors are free to do whatever they want with their own work.
- Liberal licenses like CC BY allow anyone to distribute, remix, adapt, and build upon the material in any medium or format, so long as proper attribution is given to author.
- For discipline-specific reasons, some authors place “non-commercial” (NC) and/or “no derivatives” (ND) restrictions on what end-users can do with work.
- Authors expect CC licenses will enable them to retain their rights.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS AND PRINCIPLES TO TRANSFORM SCHOLARLY COMMUNICATION

To align our institutional policies and practices toward the goal of replacing subscription-based publishing with open access (OA), we propose that the University of California assert the following rights and principles when negotiating with publishers during journal license renewals:

- 1. No copyright transfers. Our authors shall be allowed to retain copyright in their work and grant a Creative Commons Attribution license of their choosing.
- 2. No restrictions on preprints. Our authors shall have the right to submit for publication work they have previously made available as preprints.
- 3. No waivers of OA Policy. Publishers shall not require our authors to provide waivers of our Institutional OA Policy as a condition for publishing our work.
- 4. No delays to sharing. Publishers shall make work by our authors immediately available for harvest or via automatic deposit into our Institutional OA repository or another public archive.
- 5. No limitations on author reuse. Our authors shall have the right to reuse figures, tables, data, and text from their published work without permission or payment.
- 6. No impediments to rights reversion. Publishers shall provide a simple process for our authors to regain copyright in their previously published work.
- 7. No curtailment of copyright exceptions. Licenses shall not restrict, and should instead expressly protect, the rights of authors, institutions, and the public to reuse excerpts of published work consistent with legal exceptions and limitations on copyright such as fair use.
- 8. No barriers to data availability. Our authors shall have the right to make all of their data, figures, and other supporting materials from their published work publicly available.
- 9. No constraints on content mining. Publishers shall make licensed materials open, accessible, and machine-readable for text and data mining by our researchers, at no additional cost and under terms that allow retention and reuse of results.
- 10. No closed metadata. Publishers shall make bibliographic records, usage metrics, and citation data for our authors freely available, easy to parse, and machine-readable.
- 11. No free labor. Publishers shall provide our Institution with data on peer review and editorial contributions by our authors in support of journals, and such contributions shall be taken into account when determining the cost of our subscriptions or OA fees for our authors.
- 12. No long-term subscriptions. Publishers shall provide our Institution with plans and timelines for transitioning their subscription journals to OA.
- 13. No permanent paywalls. Our Institution shall receive perpetual access for previously licensed content and back files shall be made freely available once a journal transitions to OA.
- 14. No double payments. Publishers shall provide our Institution with data on hybrid OA payments from our authors and such payments shall reduce the cost of our subscriptions.
- 15. No hidden profits. Publishers shall use transparent pricing for the services they provide our authors when levying article processing charges and other fees associated with publishing.
- 16. No deals without OA offsets. Our Institution shall only enter into publishing agreements that include offsets for OA publishing by our authors.
- 17. No new paywalls for our work. Work by our authors shall be made OA on the publisher's website as part of subscription terms for new journals.
- 18. No non-disclosure agreements. Publisher agreements with our Institution shall be transparent and shall not contain terms that prevent the sharing of their contents.

STANDARD TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The (Co)Author(s) and the Copyright Holder hereby agree to be bound by the following terms and conditions:

1 LICENCE

1.1 The term “Contribution” means the article written by the (Co)Author(s) as identified on page one of this LTP and includes, without exception, all the following versions of the article:

1.1.1 Submitted Manuscript Under Review (“SMUR”): any version of the Contribution that is under formal review for inclusion in the Journal.

1.1.2 Accepted Manuscript (“AM”): the version of the Contribution that has been accepted for publication. This version may include revisions resulting from peer review but may be subject to further editorial input by Cambridge.

1.1.3 Version of Record (“VoR”): the version of the Contribution that is formally published by Cambridge. This includes any ‘FirstView article’ that is formally identified as being published before the compilation of a volume or issue as long as it is citable via a permanent identifying Digital Object Identifier (“DOI”). This does not include any ‘early release article’ that has not yet been fixed by processes that are still to be applied, such as copy-editing, proof corrections, layout, and typesetting. The VoR includes any corrected or enhanced VoR.

1.2 The term “Supplementary Material” means any additional written or illustrative materials submitted or uploaded to the Journal by the (Co)Author(s) for publication in connection with the Contribution. Supplementary Material does not form part of the Contribution and will be made available in association with the Contribution in online format only. Supplementary Material may be original content created by the (Co)Author(s) (“Original SM”) or it may be third-party material sourced by the (Co)Author(s) (“Third-party SM”).

1.3 In consideration for publication of the Contribution, the Copyright Holder hereby grants to the Proprietor:

1.3.1 an exclusive licence to publish, reproduce, distribute, and sell the Contribution or any part of it in all forms and media and in all languages throughout the world, whether print, digital / electronic, whether now known or hereinafter invented, and to grant sublicences of all translation and subsidiary rights;

1.3.2 an exclusive licence to exploit all other rights in the nature of copyright, including rental, lending and database rights and all other publishing and print on demand rights in the Contribution;

1.3.3 a non-exclusive licence to publish, reproduce, distribute, and sell the Original SM or any part of it in all forms and media and in all languages throughout the world, whether print, digital / electronic, whether now known or hereinafter invented, and to grant sublicences of all translation and subsidiary rights; and

1.3.4 a non-exclusive licence to exploit all other rights in the nature of copyright, including rental, lending and database rights and all other publishing and print on demand rights in the Original SM.

1.4 The licences described in Clause 1.3 above shall, throughout this LTP, be referred to collectively as the “Licence”.

However, we have recently learned that publishers are subverting the will of the faculty and the intent of the CC licensing system by requiring authors to sign LTP agreements that attempt to grant all rights associated with copyright exclusively to the publisher. Some of these LTP agreements also state explicitly that such license grants apply to any earlier version of the work held in public repositories and/or preprint servers, which would have direct implications on the ability of “The University Committee on Library and Scholarly Communication (UCOLASC) strongly supports retention of copyright and all rights therein by authors. Licenses to publish should only restrict what end-users may do under the license and not what the licensor (rights holder) can do.

UCOLASC urges the Project Transform Negotiating Team (PTNT) to negotiate transformative open access agreements with publishers stipulating that authors only grant “limited” or “non-exclusive” licenses to publishers. Liberal Creative Commons (CC) licenses (e.g., CC BY) should be applied as the default choice, and licenses that restrict commercial and derivative uses of the work (e.g., CC BY-NC, CC BY-ND, and CC BY-NC-ND) should function as originally intended with authors always free to do whatever they want with their own works.

To this end, UCOLASC vigorously encourages the Project Transform Working Group (PTWG) and the Project Transform Negotiating Team (PTNT) to exert the full leverage of the UC System, further demonstrate global leadership on a key priority for authors, and if necessary to stand on principles.”

BY, which allows anyone to distribute, remix, adapt, and build upon the material in any medium or format, so long as proper attribution (i.e., “BY”) is given to the author. FINAL STATEMENT

16th Berlin Open Access Conference

Delegations of research performing and research funding organizations from 38 nations and six continents, including ministries of education and research, funders, university and research leadership, libraries and national-level library consortia, scientists and scholars, gathered at the 16th Berlin Open Access Conference (B16), held 6-7 June 2023 in Berlin.

The statement that follows represents the strong consensus of all delegations present at the meeting.

Author choice and author rights must be fully enabled.

We strongly support retention of copyright and all rights therein by authors. Open access agreements with publishers should stipulate that authors only grant “limited” or “non-exclusive” licenses to publishers, and liberal Creative Commons (CC) licenses (e.g., CC-BY) should be applied as the default choice. In keeping with the spirit and goals of open access, more restrictive CC licenses (e.g., CC-BY-NC, CC-BY-ND, and CC-BY-NC-ND) should function as originally intended, in respect of the author’s disciplinary needs; consequently, author “license to publish” agreements should not limit the author’s rights in any way. The author’s choice of license should not affect the price of publication services.

Quality assurance in the process of scientific peer review must be clearly separated from the processes associated with the provision of publishing services to prevent practices that lower standards in order to increase publisher revenue. Editorial independence must be guaranteed.

2.3 In consideration of publication of the Contribution, the Author hereby grants to the Proprietor:

2.3.1 a non-exclusive licence to publish, reproduce, distribute, and sell the Contribution, or any part of it, and any Supplementary Material in all forms and media and in all languages throughout the world, whether print, digital / electronic, whether now known or hereinafter invented, and to grant sublicences of all translation and subsidiary rights; and

2.3.2 a non-exclusive licence to exploit all other rights in the nature of copyright, including rental, lending and database rights and all other publishing and print on demand rights in the Contribution and any Supplementary Material.

3.7 Publication of the VoR under the CC BY NC SA, CC BY NC ND or CC BY NC Creative Commons Licences expressly prohibits any commercial reuse by the end user. Where an end user wishes to make commercial reuse of the VoR, such use shall remain subject to Cambridge’s permission if the request is received by Cambridge, or the Author’s permission if the request is received by the Author.

Copyright ownership of the Article

Each author retains their copyright in the Article. Except for the license of the Article as set out below, this License Agreement does not transfer any rights in patents, trademarks or other intellectual property rights to Journal Owner. Journal Owner shall publish and distribute the Article with an appropriate copyright notice.

Authors' rights in the Article

Subject to the terms of this License Agreement, each author retains the right to re-use the Article for their own commercial and non-commercial purposes, as well as to create derivative works, without permission from Journal Owner or payment to Journal Owner. Each author shall, in connection with any such re-use of the Article, fully acknowledge and attribute the original publication of the Article.

Nothing in this License Agreement shall limit the re-use rights of authors, except in relation to the grant of rights to third parties for commercial purposes, as set out below.

Each author agrees not to license any third party to exercise all or any of the rights in the Article or any part of the Article for commercial purposes. Each author agrees to promptly refer any third party requests for a license of such rights to Journal Owner.

Author's grant of rights in the Article

Each author hereby grants to Journal Owner the following rights, effective from the date on which the Article is accepted for publication:

- a) the non-exclusive right to publish, reproduce, display, distribute and otherwise use the Article, or any part of the Article, for any purpose, in print, electronic and all other media (whether now known or later developed), and to prepare derivative works, in any form, in all languages, throughout the world, for the full term of copyright;
- b) the non-exclusive right to license third parties to exercise all or any of the rights granted herein for non-commercial purposes;
- c) the exclusive right to license third parties to exercise all or any of the rights granted herein for commercial purposes; and
- d) the right to enforce the rights granted herein against third parties.

Action items from authors for moving forward

- Institutions and publishers should prioritize and support the retention of copyright and all rights therein by authors.
- License to Publish (LTP) agreements should only restrict what end-users may do under the license and not what the licensor (rights holder) can do.
- Transformative open access agreements should stipulate that authors only grant “limited” or “non-exclusive” licenses to publishers.
- Liberal Creative Commons (CC) licenses (e.g., CC BY) should be applied as the default choice in transformative agreements, but if authors choose licenses that restrict commercial and/or derivative uses of the work (e.g., CC BY-NC, CC BY-ND, CC BY-NC-ND) then those licenses should function as originally intended with authors always free to do whatever they want with their own work.
- LTP agreements should be simple with “human-readable” language, publisher workflows should support CC BY as default, and downstream implications of restrictive CC licenses should be made clear to authors.

- We will be mindful of any concerns the panelists, as representatives of commercial entities, might have regarding open discussion of policies and potential implications for competition law. We will only discuss policies already publicly available.
- We acknowledge that publishers cannot discuss or speculate on future changes in such a setting without risking breaching competition law, and if even one publisher does this then that may compromise other publishers.
- Thus, our session will be conducted in full respect of anti-competitive concerns.
